Leader Tells of Progress in Kenya

"How can you ask Africa to slow down when it is surrounded by countries that are going forward?"

This was one of many questions asked by Musa Amalemba at the World Affairs Institute Wednesday night.

Mr. Amalemba, speaking on "Kenya," is minister of housing in that country.

Described in his homeland as a "moderate," he commented that the "movement in Kenya is more for independence than it is for freedom."

"If we were free from colonialism or imperialism," he said, "we would just fall victim to another 'ism'."

Mr. Amalemba pointed out that before Kenya will be in a condition where the Africans can rule themselves, the British must

Color, Rhythm Will Be Seen On Band Day

A damper has been put on Band Day ceremonies with the cancellation of a scheduled parade through downtown Omaha Saturday morning.

A Shriner parade took precedence.

OU Band Director Jack Malik expressed hopes that all University students would be out to support the nine Nebraska and Iowa high schools participating in the annual event at the OU stadium.

He added that OU could take on the color and spirit of large universities in our area if all students would come.

Some six hundred high school and college musicians, 35 baton twirlers and seven drum majors will take part in the ceremonies which start with the football game with Ft. Hays State at 2 p.m.

During half-time ceremonies the bands will form an outline of the United States with Omaha.

Council Workers Busy As Color, Memories Promised

From the kick-off parade at noon Friday to the dance music of Ralph Marterie Saturday night, "the biggest and best Homecoming ever" has been promised by Student Council planners.

Both Shelia Dunklau, general chairman, and Lyle Franzen, council president, were enthusiastic in praising the work done by all committee members and describing the annual welcome to OU grads.

"If students come through with the spirit we're counting on it will be a weekend to remember," the chairman predicted.

Though details of the parade are yet uncertain, there was confirmation of a motorcade "through South Omaha."

Council members John Hofschire and Kendall Brink were delegated to work out the South

Omaha parade at the Council meeting Tuesday.

Streamers Not Enough

The final route will be announced in next week's Gateway. "We want it understood that only cars decorated in a true sense of the word will be allowed to take part this year," Franzen warned. "It will be up to the discretion of the council as to the suitability of each entry."

He said "simple streamers are not enough."

Which classes will be dismissed and for how long is still undecided but "I'm sure everyone will be free to at least join the parade," the council prexy pointed out.

No Bonfire

He doubted that the entire afternoon would be class-free however.

To the disappointment of many there will be no bonfire this year.

But Franzen promised "the best imitation—torches and that sort of thing." This is the first year the torch ceremony will be in the "Pep Bowl" (women's athletic field), he added.

The Friday evening event is set for 6 p. m. in the "pep bowl." The band, Feathers, Orchestras and other spirited groups are scheduled to take part in the noise-making.

"That's when the Homecoming Princess will be revealed," Franzen said. "There will be the traditional te-pee presentation ceremonies to highlight the activities."

Candidates Named

Candidates for Princess, to be voted on next Wednesday in the Student Center, include Susan Ewing, Wannette Bush, Carol Sue Child and Bobbi Garvin, all seniors.

Miss Ewing represents Alpha Xi Delta and is a member of Student Council.

She sang the lead in past OU presentations of South Pacific, Call Me Madam and Bells Are Ring and was Junior Prom Queen last year.

Miss Bush, "Webby" to those who know her, carries the Zeta Tau Alpha hopes in the election. She lists more than 10 activities including cheerleading, Marching Angels and Brush and Palette Club.

She was Miss Omaha of 1959 and was Theta Chi Sweater Girl her freshman year.

Miss Child, president of Sigma Kappa, is a journalism major and is Gateway news editor. She is a member of Feathers, Cornithians and the Panhellenic Council.

She is a past president of Feathers and is Angels Flight publicity officer.

UCS Helps Immanuel Home Provide Activities for Aged

By Carolyn Richmond

A group of elderly people sat in a small room discussing current events. Down the hall in another room, a lone old gentleman peered anxiously at the activity on a huge television screen.

These scenes were just two of the many that greeted three OU students during a recent visit to the Immanuel Home for the Aged.

The Home, which was begun in 1931, houses 115 persons between the ages of 65 and 101. The men and women come from all over Nebraska and the surrounding area and are admitted through application to the Home.

There is opportunity for these elderly persons to adjust to the changes which occur as they grow older. There are many activities provided to fill their lonely hours and help them remain active in a society that too often forgets them.

The recreational activities include a crafts class devoted to such projects as needlework, painting and ceramics. The articles made are on display in the main recreation room of the Home.

Other activities provided to engage the interests of the Home residents include a weekly Bible study group, song-fests, games, parties or special group excursions throughout Omaha.

The fourth floor of the Home is devoted to persons who are bedridden, incapable of caring for themselves or requiring constant nursing care.

The second and third floors are used for persons who are reasonably self-reliant.

One of the major problems confronting the Home today is that of adequate space. The recreational areas are cramped and crowded. There is a waiting list for admissions with a minimum time limit of six months.

The specific project to be undertaken by Home officials in the immediate future is that of providing new beds for all the rooms on the second and third floors.

The major source of income for maintenance of the Home is provided by patient fees, the Augustana Lutheran Church and United Community Services.

In 1959, UCS provided $20,000 toward building a $40,000 elevator in the Home. This is just one of the goals which UCS has helped the Home realize.

UCS can do this only through the contributions which it receives from you. The Immanuel Home for the Aged is just one of 55 agencies receiving support from UCS.

OU is noted for its generosity in supplying dollars and dimes for the support of this annual campaign. Why don't you "be a good guy and give?"

Blanksten to Speak At 'World Affairs'

Dr. George Blanksten, professor of political science at Northwestern University, will speak at the second Institute of World Affairs Oct. 19.

Dr. Blanksten, who also spoke at the Institute two years ago, has selected "Latin American Dilemma" as his topic.

Lester D. Mallory, originally scheduled to lecture, is unable to appear.

Pan, Man Vote Will Aid UCS

Cutest Pan and Ugliest Man at the University will be decided in the Oct. 26 election.

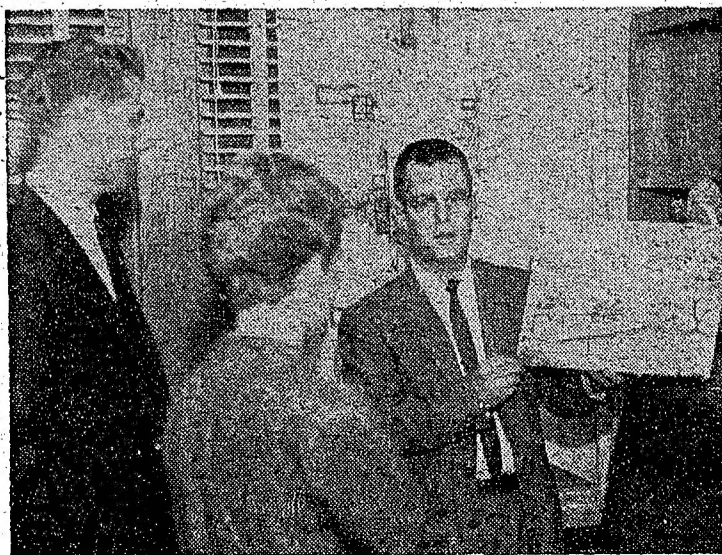

The fund-raising contest is sponsored by Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity in conjunction with the United Community Services drive now in progress.

Monday through Wednesday, Oct. 24-26, from 8:30-2:30 on Monday and Tuesday and 8:30-12 noon Wednesday are the times to contribute by placing money in the jars before the candidates' pictures. Each penny is a vote.

Names and 8"x10" photographs of candidates from sororities, fraternities and Independent Students Association should be turned in to the president of APO, Jack Vogt, by Friday, Oct. 22.

Announcement of the winners will be at a 3 p. m. dance in Room 312 of the Student Center on Wednesday.

Other information concerning the contest may be obtained from Jack Vogt, vice-president Pat Shields or Pledgetrainer, Bob Cramer.

'House' Guests Meet Faculty, Ask Class-Time Revisit

Omaha University became a showplace for open house visitors Sunday with guests strolling around campus, visiting classrooms and faculty members and finishing with coffee in the Student Center.

President Milo Bail said he couldn't tell exactly how many people visited OU "because they were scattered in various buildings, but from the information received from the host and hostesses the crowd was fairly large."

He added that "many of the visitors and faculty liked the idea of meeting in each member's own office rather than having all the faculty concentrated in one building or rows of offices. The visitors felt they had more time to get to know the instructors."

Many of the visitors said it would be interesting to come to OU while classes were in session and see the students in their activities.

Arts and Science Enrollment Vaults

The College of Arts and Sciences has recorded the largest enrollment in its history this semester, according to Dr. Robert D. Harper, dean of the college.

This semester's total enrollment is 908, which compares with 830 in 1959. "This is the first time in the history of the college that enrollment has exceeded 900," he said.

Departments in the college which have had the sharpest increases this year are chemistry, English, geography, history and speech.

Besides increased enrollment, the college differs from the 1959 college in other respects.

Perhaps the most significant is the new dean, Dr. Harper was appointed Dean of the Arts and Sciences College upon the retirement, at the end of last semester, of Dr. William H. Thompson.

Several new courses have been added to the college in the art, English, economics, mathematics, psychology and speech departments.

The dean's office has been relocated from the third floor to room 201 on the second floor.

Dr. Harper has a new secretary this year—Peggy Staley, Miss Staley, who has been at Omaha University for four years, was secretary to Dean Donald Woods last year.

OU Instructor Pulls Big Switch From Recipes Back to Rhetoric

Miss Turner returns . . . to teaching English.

By Paul Derry

From teaching rhetoric to recipes and back to rhetoric sounds like quite a switch.

For Omaha University Instructor Margery Turner the switch was no problem.

When she came to OU in 1958 to work on her master's degree in English, she brought with her degrees in journalism and home economics from Iowa State University and a background of promotional writing in the commercial food field. She also worked as a dietician at Clarkson Hospital.

Miss Turner's first teaching experience at OU was in 1959. She taught a freshman English course while taking graduate courses.

Last summer she taught a home economics course. "It was quite a change from English," she said, "but each course took a lot of preparation."

But Miss Turner couldn't leave out English entirely and had each home student write a term paper.

This semester, as a full time instructor, Miss Turner is back teaching English. During the day she teaches English 110, "Communications," and at night she has an English 112 class.

The Communications course is new to the College of Arts and Sciences, being revised and taken from the College of Applied Arts. Miss Turner said she has 116 students enrolled in the

OU Prof Featured At Co-ed Confab

Margaret Killian, head of the home economics department, returned last Saturday from a trip to Wyoming University at Laramie where she was banquet speaker at the Annual Work Shop of the Associated Women Students.

"The purpose of the AWS is to stimulate women living off the campus to take a more active part in campus life," she said, "It's also their responsibility to set rules for the women living on campus concerning hours and activities."

Miss Killian spoke to an audience of close to 250 sorority house representatives and returning advisers on the subject of leadership on and off the campus.

Other activities included a conference with the Wyoming University Dean of Women, a tour of the campus, and participation in the dedication of six new campus buildings.

course, which is primarily for student nurses. "In it students learn to read, write, speak and listen."

Teaching two courses and writing her thesis keeps her busy, Miss Turner said. She is halfway through her thesis which is on a study of the recent criticisms of Mark Twain. She hopes to receive her master's degree next June.

While attending Iowa State Miss Turner had no intentions of entering the teaching field.

"I had always been interested in English and writing and did quite a bit of it in college and immediately following graduation," she said. "Later I decided I wanted to work with youth, improving their writing, reading and speaking abilities."

Thus with her background and interest she found the switch to her present field easy.

Before coming to OU Miss Turner said she felt she was getting in a rut. "I was anxious to try new and different things," she said. At OU she's been able to do both.

Miss Turner is no stranger to OU. A native Omahan, she graduated from Central High School, and attended OU during her freshman year.

When she receives her master's degree, Miss Turner plans to teach on a college level. She doesn't know if she'll stay at OU but says she enjoys the campus very much.

Since coming to OU Miss Turner said she has had little time for anything but her work, except her hobby, which is free lance writing for cook books and food pamphlets.

Hawaii Program Open for Students

The 1961 summer session program at the University of Hawaii in Honolulu is now open for enrollment, Dr. Robert E. Cralle, director announced recently.

Summer session in Hawaii offers an opportunity for students and teachers to have a summer vacation of travel and study.

Program rates for the six weeks start from as little as $555 for students and $569 for teachers and include: round trip transportation by major air and steamship lines, Waikiki Beach hotel and hotel-dormitory accommodations, Island sightseeing trips, and Hawaiian social functions.

Transportation from the campus to living accommodations is also a free service of the program.

Over 215 courses in 39 fields are offered in the summer session's curriculum, taught by a visiting faculty from Europe, the Orient and the United States.

"Cost of the program is tax deductible," Dr. Cralle said, "when teachers are earning in-service requirements for professional advancement. Extra credits earned by undergraduate students are transferrable to nearly all colleges and universities."

Complete information including a 20-page bulletin and application form is available by writing to: Dr. Robert E. Cralle, Director, University Study Tour to Hawaii, 2275 Mission Street, San Francisco 10, California.

Working Abroad? Advice Available

Consultation on foreign business and diplomacy will be available for interested students next Friday.

Dr. Stanton S. von Crabill, vice president of the American Institute for Foreign Trade, will be available for interviews between 9 and 11:30 a. m.

As the only organization of its type of AIFT offers a unique post-graduate program in languages, area study and foreign trade.

The nine-month course has been regarded as "invaluable" for those planning to work abroad, whether in government service or in commerce.

Appointments with Dr. von Crabill may be arranged through Dr. Christopher Espinosa, chairman of OU's foreign languages department.

Book Critic Haas on Fourth 'Nights' Fare

Victor P. Haas will discuss contemporary writing, with special emphasis on the modern American novel at the Gene Epley Conference Center in the fourth "University Nights" program from 8 to 10 p. m. tonight.

Haas has had twenty years' experience with the Omaha World-Herald, in which his book reviews are a regular feature.

Thousands of Dollars Waiting For Qualified Students with Applications in by Deadlines

Applications for Fulbright Scholarships, House of Edgeworth Scholarships, Inter-American Cultural Convention awards and the Pillsbury Awards Program are now being accepted.

The deadline for filing for Fulbright Scholarships and the IACC awards is November 1.

Recipients of Fulbright Scholarships for study in Europe, Latin America, and the Asia-Pacific area will receive tuition, maintenance and round-trip costs. IACC awards for study in Latin America, cover transportation, tuition, and partial maintenance costs.

Last year Rita Peltz was the first student in Omaha University history to receive a Fulbright award. She is now studying in France.

The House of Edgeworth Scholarship is open to graduate and undergraduate students of business, economics, marketing, advertising and commerce.

The $500 undergraduate scholarship will be presented in an advertising slogan contest. The $500 graduate scholarship will be awarded in a marketing plan contest. Final entry date is March 15, 1961.

The Pillsbury Award for 1961 is given to a senior Home Economics major and consists of an on-the-job training fellowship. In addition to a salary of $4,500, the recipient will receive a grant of $1,000. Six finalists for the award will each receive $250.

Any O.U. student wishing more information about these awards should see his department head.

CAE Sends Four Men to Meetings

The College of Adult Education will be represented this week in Denver, Colorado and Fort Leavenworth, Kansas as staff heads plan trips.

Dr. Donald Woods, dean of CAE and Michel Beilis will be in Denver attending the national convention of the Adult Education Association of the USA.

Dr. Woods is a newly-elected regional director for the Nebraska Adult Education Association, and Beilis is recorder for state Association workshops.

Dr. Otto Snarr and Roy Nolte will go to Fort Leavenworth to discuss military education programs with a group of officers and to give advance counseling to future bootstrappers.

Bonner Is Only One Where Many Needed

By Ken Zimmerman

Being that time of the year, in a presidential election year, eyes are turned once again toward politics.

Whether it's "a time for greatness" or just the fact that mass communications have reached an all-time high in efficiency, the fact remains that candidates are receiving more attention and consequent scrutiny than at any time in history.

Withdrawing and viewing objectively, one may spend a great deal of time contemplating 1960 politics and trying to conclude what they really are.

What is this "image" which office-seekers try so desperately to create? And more significant, why?

Perhaps Dr. Thomas Bonner could answer that question.

Why Surprise?

The announcement last week that a campaign of sorts would be waged to elect him to Congress brought widespread surprise, to say the least.

From my seat up in the bleachers I stood and shouted "bravo!" before I noticed all the puzzled expressions surrounding me.

Why the surprise?

Can it be that public office is not the domain of the intelligent, qualified political scientist?

Why should one of the men whose name will appear on the ballot in the "Congressman, Second District" slot be prompted to remark (off the record) "what's he trying to do?" when he learned of the write-in campaign?

Dr. Bonner's supporters described a need for a liberal candidate, labeling both Democratic and Republican nominees as "too conservative" when the "draft Tom Bonner drive" was launched.

With the risk of being accused of bringing politics into a student newspaper I wish to air an opinion.

Too Many Advisors?

Government has reached a staggering degree of complexity and can no longer be operated by the winners of popularity contests.

Why must we elect candidates who immediately hire a staff of advisors to tell them what's going on and, frankly, what they're supposed to do.

In convincing Dr. Bonner that he has a place in public office someone has demonstrated wisdom and indeed foresight.

I use the latter term because I cannot seriously believe these efforts are primarily aimed at this year's election.

Past experience has illustrated that to attain elected office one must be "well-known."

Why Strategy?

To those who know him Dr. Bonner needs no introduction as an expert in his field. He cannot help but be respected.

But it must be admitted that outside the academic circles his qualifying achievements have gone virtually unnoticed.

This "campaign" should at least make his name more familiar off-campus.

It's unfortunate that such strategic tactics must be employed before serious efforts can be made to elect a great man to office.

My appraisal of Dr. Bonner is of the man, not the political beliefs. I have had no opportunity to hear his legislative convictions. That is not the point.

Whether the voters want a Democrat or Republican, a conservative or a liberal, is their own choice but what is important and necessary is that men of Dr. Bonner's caliber are available to represent those views.

Editors Prepare for Career Dinner Served By Candlelight

P. Russ Grove

Editor's note: This is the second in a series on the Gateway Staff.

The Gateway's news editor is Carol Sue Child, a 20-year-old senior and journalism major.

Carol has worked on the Gateway for three years, as a news and society reporter.

Her primary duty as news editor is writing stories. She said she assigns between 15 and 20 news stories a week. The stories range from campus elections and polls to speeches and plays.

However, her job doesn't stop with assignments. She writes stories, helps on the copy desk and writes headlines.

In the field of campus communications, she serves as the Angel's Publicity Officer.

Carol Sue plans to continue in journalism after graduation next June. Either on the staff of a women's magazine, specializing in interior decorating or writing greeting cards.

She said she would like to write cards with a happy note rather than a sad message.

Carol Sue would like to try her hand at writing contemporary cards, explaining they too have a sense of humor.

The Gateway's sports editor Angus Campbell is doing double duty reporting this year.

Besides being Gateway sports editor, he reports sports for KMTV.

He covers athletic events in the Omaha area for KMTV, plus banquets and interviews.

Angus transferred from the University of Minnesota at Duluth, where he was a pre-journalism major.

At Omaha U., he's a journalism major and plans to continue in news work after graduating.

He blames "poor teams for the poor spirit" at OU, but says from the looks of things the athletic outlook for winning teams is good.

Angus forecasts three-wins for the OU gridders this season, and said tomorrow's game with Ft. Hays will be one of them.

"My job on the paper is making assignments, writing some stories, copy reading all sports stories, and writing headlines, making-up the sports page and proof reading Gateway copy at the printers," he says. "But the biggest problem is getting everything done by deadline time. Sometimes it's a real headache," he said.

His objective as Gateway sports editor is to cover everything that happens in Omaha U. athletics.

OU participater in an involuntary lights out exercise Tuesday. Coffee candlelight was the word as a power failure enveloped the campus in blackness.

The Ouampi room in the basement of the Student Center was quickly brightened by candles and the evening meal took on an exotic air.

Although Jane Andersen's art students may have been painting modern art when the lights went out at 4:45 p.m., they had to switch to 16th century style for the next hour and a half—with candles.

The one spot on campus that caused immediate worry was the food service section, where the freezers ceased to operate, and the thought of possible food spoilage caused some concern.

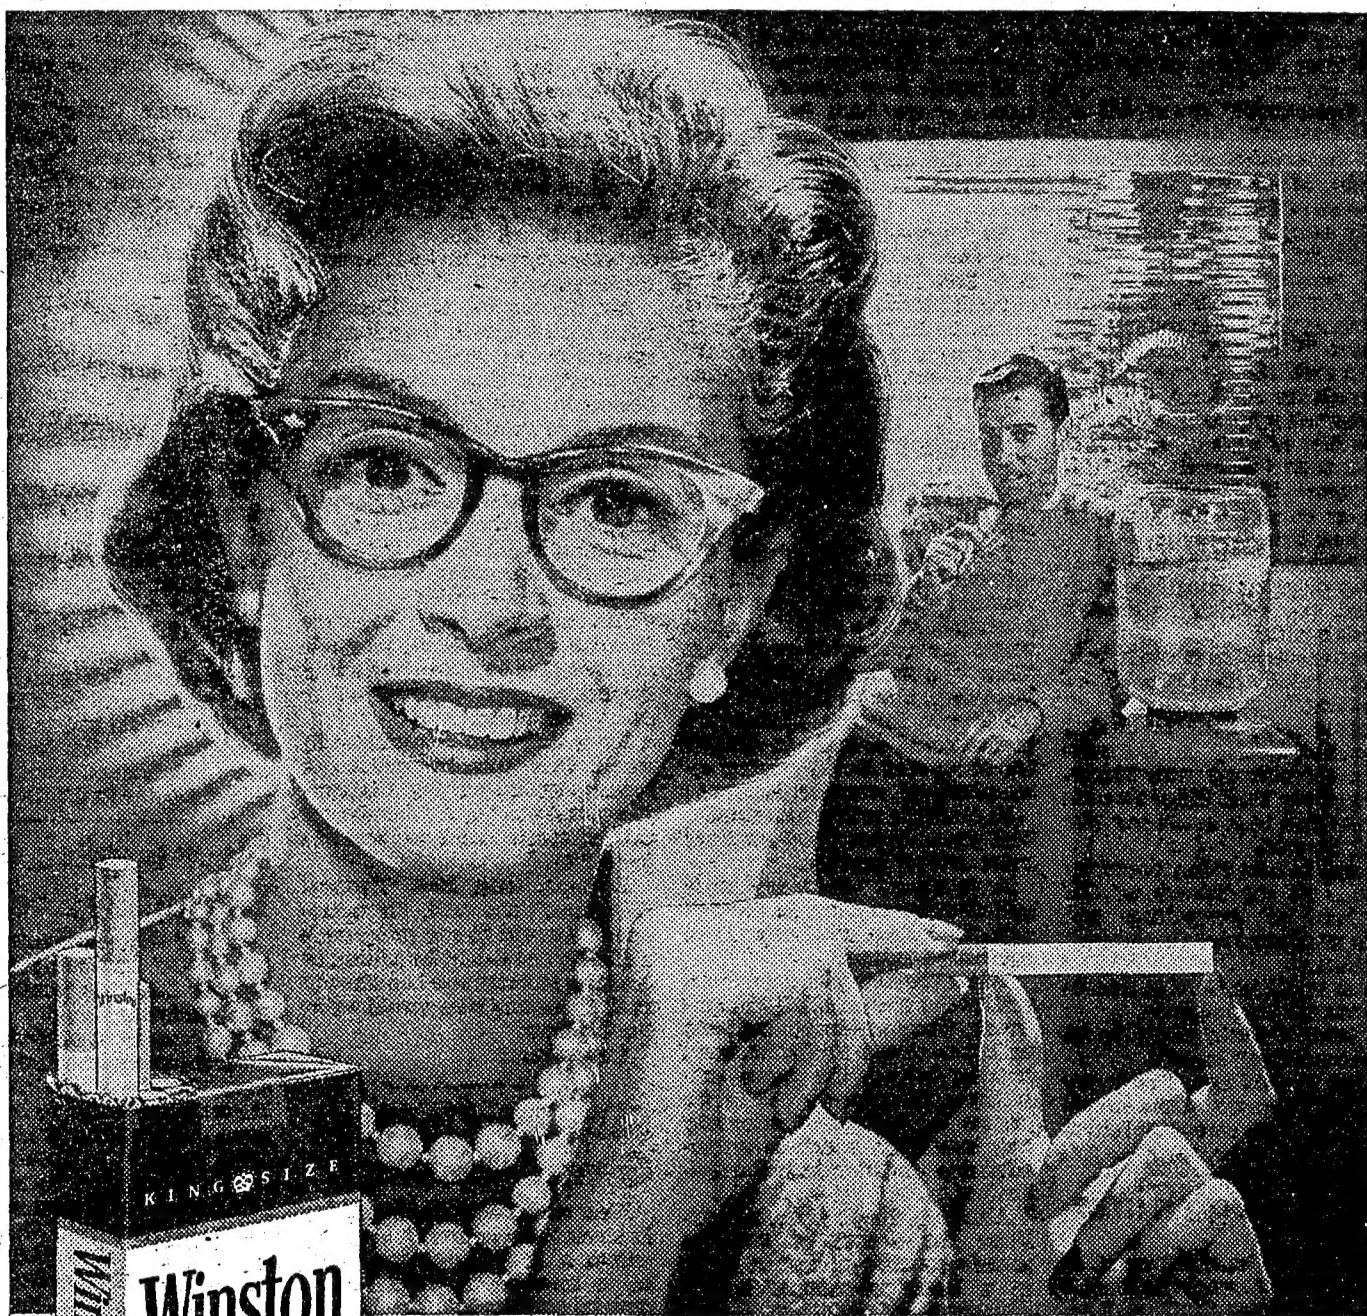

As of press time, the Buildings and Grounds department was still investigating the cause of the power knockout.

The only section of campus where the "lights out" condition didn't seem to make much difference was in the Gateway's darkroom.

"But," commented photographer George Ragan, "for a while there, we probably had the darkest darkroom in town."

Cop Resigns, Gets 'Degree'

By Dick Sheehan

His trademark—a warm, friendly smile.

His job—campus policeman. Bill Eden accepted a position this week at the Good Shepherd Home.

He was one of the two additional men hired last fall to beef up the original two-man campus police force.

"I'm not exactly tickled to leave," he smiled.

"I've enjoyed it here and I feel that I've learned something from the people that I've come in contact with on the job."

Trademark . . . Friendliness

"I feel more tolerant and broadminded than when I came here. And I can't help but feel a bit younger too," he laughed.

Bill attended South High School before going to work for a large packing firm in Omaha, where he spent 15 years, most of the time as a security policeman.

He came to OU in the fall of '59.

Bill formulated some definite opinions about the sons and daughters of Ouampli while policing the campus in his chauffeured Volkswagen.

"It usually takes about a month for the students to get in gear where traffic regulations are concerned," he said.

"But then they get used to it. The majority of them, I think, are exceptionally well behaved."

The idea of retiring some day in the future doesn't give Bill any visions of sitting idly by a pond or stream with a fishing pole, just doing nothing.

"I think a person is better off to keep plugging along," he commented, "as long as he doesn't ruin his health."

Where recreation is concerned, he likes to do "a little bit of everything."

"This summer I got the biggest kick out of touring the Colorado mountains with my wife Marge. Driving over Trail Ridge Road is a lot of fun in a small car like mine," he said.

"I want to take this opportunity to wish all my friends at OU the best of everything and plenty of success for the future," he added.

What would he do if he had to start his life over again?

"I think I would study to be a psychoanalyst," he said.

"Then I could have fun trying to figure out some of the people that write those screwball letters to the Public Pulse."

Not Enough Time

Dear Editor:

It would be to the interest of the Student Council to better publicize campus elections. I refer, in particular to the Student Council-Class Officer-Homcoming election—next week.

None of the organizations running candidates received notice in time to elect their candidates properly and have their pictures taken. Notice was received one week before the election which is not enough time to prepare.

The Student Council would do well in the future to give notice to participating organizations at least two weeks in advance of the elections.

Instructors and Students Laugh About Baby Faces

By Paul Derry

One of the most popular devices to play on man's humorous side has now hit the Omaha University campus.

On a bulletin board in the English department are pinned familiar faces that have for years brightened the pages of newspapers and magazines and more recently the television screen.

The graphic expressions portrayed by youngsters that warm the heart and evoke bursts of laughter when matched with appropriate adult comments grasp the attention of all who pass. Faculty members and students alike respond with a laughter that has other third floor tenants wondering if the English staff is spending all their time correcting freshmen themes.

If third floor tenants would take a closer look they would discover that freshmen themes aren't the only thing that provokes laughter from the English staff.

An observer would even see long time professors smile when they look at the picture of a startled faced youngster who seems to be saying, "You don't expect us to spell Onomatopoeia!"

If the observer listens carefully

ly he may hear the prof., chuckle as he looks at the youngster whose eye lids are half closed and whose mouth is turned down. The picture is captioned, "Good morning class."

If he keeps his attention on the professor and has not allowed it to move to the bulletin board, the observer might hear laughter come from the professor whose eyes have now moved to the picture of a frightened youngster, hair standing on end, who says through the caption, "I like to read Poe at midnight."

But the bulletin board wasn't meant to prove that professors are human, or that babies are lovable characters.

It is the brainchild of two part time English instructors, Mrs. Beryl Eagleson and Mrs. Marlys Noonan, who are working on their master's degrees at O.U.

Both select the pictures and write the captions.

"The days needed brightening up somewhat," said Mrs. Eagleson "so Marlys thought up the bulletin board idea." Both instructors correct many freshmen theme papers.

Mr. Noonan and Mrs. Eagleson have received such laughing responses from students and faculty members since starting the project last week that they have decided to continue it until they run out of pictures.

This is not likely to happen for some time since Mrs. Noonan has two calendars, each with 52 photographs, plus other baby pictures that she got while working at the World-Herald.

Although both work together in writing the captions, they admit that they have received many helpful suggestions from other faculty members.

Since they plan to continue it, would they consider making a larger display, writing the captions, and placing it where more O.U. students could see and enjoy it?

Perhaps, said Mrs. Noonan. "However," she said, "if someone else would like to make such a display she would be willing to lend the pictures she has already used to anyone who would write the captions."

Any takers?

Skip the Coffee Give UCS Dime

New model cars are appearing in showrooms across Omaha and within a few weeks there will be a number of them in the campus parking lots.

New and expensive gadgets or "accessories" for study are selling like hotdogs at the world series in the bookstore and downtown.

Dime cups of coffee flow abundantly in the Ouampli Room and the cafeteria.

Students are enjoying greater wealth and higher spending than at any time in history.

For many there is a problem of what to do with the excess change in their pockets.

The United Community Service campaign opened this week.

Favor Kennedy By Small Margin In Gateway Poll

Senator John Kennedy squeaked past Vice President Richard Nixon in last week's Gateway presidential preference poll.

Of the 138 students who voted, 69 named Sen. Kennedy while 67 voted for the vice president.

Two write-in ballots, one for Dr. Thomas Bonner and one for "Alvin" were included in the low total, blamed on a mix-up in the announced locations of the ballot box.

The one box available was placed at the Student Center information counter where it will again appear Oct. 28 when a second poll will be taken.

One of Mr. Nixon's followers added a campaign slogan on his ballot.

"One Mr. K is enough," it read. "I'm for Nixon."

Pep, Gab and Activities Rank High on Poll

"Vote for my candidate!" "No, vote for mine!"

This was the cry at the Student Center Wednesday when typical freshmen were being chosen. Why one candidate was better than another wasn't often asked but many had opinions.

Enthusiasm, personality, good scholarship plus participation in extra-curricular activities were all listed as characteristics a typical freshman should possess.

Sophomore Rich Zitnik felt that a typical freshman should "participate fully in student activities and help to raise school spirit."

Freshman Cathy Platt and sophomore John Pycha agreed that they should "have respect for upper-classmen."

A gift of gab and an enthusiasm for the school were characteristics listed by sophomore Mary Ellen Gundry.

Bootstrapper Ray Deuschle thought the typical freshman should be alert and listen to upperclassmen. Freshmen should "talk less and learn more," he said. "They aren't all well-groomed and many are in college for a lark."

The most inclusive answer was given by sophomore Bill Palmer, who was busy getting out the vote. The winner should have personality, participate in extra-curricular activities, keep up his grades and present a good appearance, he said. "You should weigh the candidate on his qualities and not vote for a friend."

Of course he had to admit his candidate was the best on all these points even though friendship did enter in a little.

New English Class Taught by Rodgers

One of the new courses added to the OU schedule this fall is English 115. It is taught by Dr. Paul Rodgers.

This course was designed to meet the needs of entering freshman, who score high enough on the entrance exams to be exempt from English 111 and 112.

To qualify a student must score in the 90th percentile on his University entrance exams.

Dr. Rodgers said the course was started because these better students need training in research and advanced composition before they begin upper division English courses.

The course is composed mainly of critical thinking and writing, and covers novels, essays and poetry. The writing requirements for 115 are about double those of English 112.

"This course is part of Omaha University's effort to provide special training for special people—the gifted students," commented Dr. Rodgers. "I am very pleased with the class and am enjoying it. I hope the students are also."

'Good Guys' Help Various Agencies

For 14 years Mrs. J., an elderly arthritic victim, has been confined to her bed and wheelchair. Occasionally she listens to her radio; sometimes she sleeps. She has one special link with the outside world—her visiting nurse.

During the visit the nurse takes care of her personal needs, gives her an injection and chats awhile.

The visits to Mrs. J. are among the 30,000 annual calls made by the Visiting Nurses Association, a UCS sponsored program.

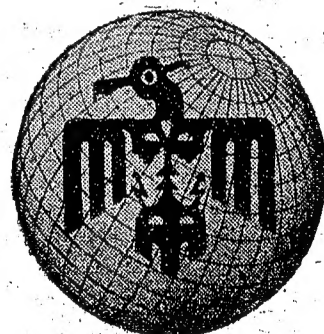

Out of the total 1960 budget of the VNA, $219,421, the UCS allocated $94,551, nearly one-half.

How would the above scene change if all "the good guys," expected to meet the $2,017,216 goal, decided not to give? And what effects would it have on the other 54 agencies partially supported by the United Community Services—the Boy Scouts, Camp Fire Girls, religious charities, and homes for children and the aged?

The drive, which runs from Oct. 3-29, will answer the question. OU students will get their opportunity to help determine the outcome during the Cutest Pan-Ugliest Man contest Oct. 24-26.

Last year's contest netted $722.28, less than half of the '58 proceeds. Will there be a decrease again this year? Or will all "good guys" help the UCS reach its goal so 55 scenes in Omaha can continue with full effect?

Intramural Relay Race to Be Nov. 3

The intramural four-mile relay race is scheduled for November 3 at 4 p. m. on the University campus. In this race each man will run one mile.

Entrants must register in the intramural office, Room 251, Adm. Bldg., by Oct. 31.

Football

Zeke Moe Joes took over leadership in intramural flag football standings by defeating Sig Eps 3-0 and downing ISA 9-2.

In other games, Casey's Crew beat Eagles 2-0 and Sig Eps bumped TGE 18-7. Pi Kaps won a forfeit over the Eagles and Theta Chi walloped the TKE's 29-0.

There has been a change in the Monday schedule. The Theta Chi-Teke Moe Joe and TKE-Eagles games have been changed from the Women's Athletic field to the Dodge Street field.

Where Is the Bowling Alley

By Jack Fisher

The crashing of pins and the thunder of the speeding ball this winter will be akin to the cheers of OU football fans thus far at their victory celebrations.

OU's bowling alley-to-be will once again be a dark and dismal tomb, infested with empty light-bulb sockets, sealed off heating and air-conditioning ducts and 'juiceless' electrical conduits.

Its concrete floor, all 5,000 square feet of it will shiver in the cold without its protective oak flooring. The walls and their pseudo tapestries of fiberboard and cobwebs will shimmer only for an errant sunbeam or two.

All in all, no commitments have been made, no contracts let and no equipment has been purchased at this writing.

Mr. John F. Heckinger of the Business Administration Department says: approximately $136,000.00 is needed to cover the total cost of furnishing the room and purchasing and installation of the planned-for eight alleys. Actual construction time will run about six months but no funds have been allocated for the Bowling Alley at this time.

Virgil Yelkin Attends Rules Conference

Omaha University baseball coach Virgil Yelkin attended a baseball rules committee meeting Oct. 11-12, in Chicago, Ill.

Yelkin was recently appointed to the eight man National Alliance Baseball Rules Committee of the National Federation.

Yelkin is representing the NAIA Coaches Association in determining the 1961 rules for high schools, junior colleges and NAIA colleges and universities.

Conference Action Begins Tomorrow

Coming out of the pre-conference campaign the Omaha U. Indians will attempt to break on top of the Central Intercollegiate Conference, playing host to Fort Hays State at the University Stadium.

After dropping a 44-6 decision

Omaha Game To Be on TV

Omaha U.'s conference opener will be on television if all goes well this Saturday.

An advanced projects class in speech is going to televise the game on closed circuit TV as a class project. Bill Kautter is in charge of the production and fathered the idea.

Two cameras will be used and over 1400 feet of cable is required to transmit the picture from the field to the TV studio in the Applied Arts Building.

The picture will be transmitted to the TV center and the best picture will be selected to send back to a monitor that will be stationed near the bench on the playing field.

The 1400 feet of camera cable was lent to the school by TV stations WOW-TV and KMTV.

School technician George Ragan is slated to do the setting up of the whole operation.

to Idaho State last week, the Indians return home to open conference play Saturday. Their record stands at no wins against three losses and one tie.

Coach Al Caniglia, in returning from Idaho State, said the Indians escaped any serious injuries in the contest.

Caniglia will introduce press box coaching here Saturday. Marking the first time this method has been used by an Omaha University coach. It was used here once, but by an opposition coach. Caniglia first employed the press box method at Idaho State last week.

An added attraction to the CIC contest will be the second annual Band Day program. Inaugurated last year the Band Day program will draw bands from neighboring towns in Nebraska and Iowa.

Last year Fort Hays defeated the Indians 18-6 in the season final at Hays, Kansas, in a game played in sub-freezing temperatures.

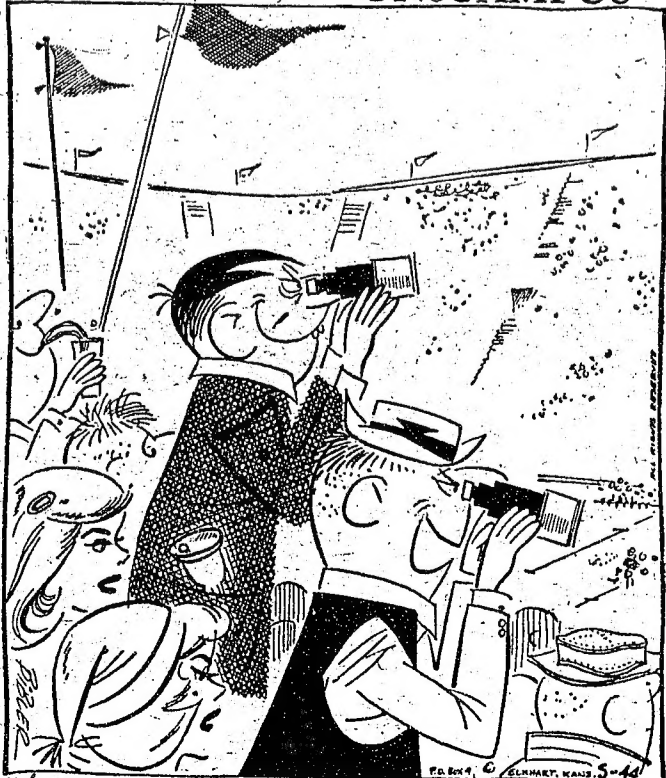

This was the lone win for the Kansans in the CIC. It enables them to tie the Indians for last place each having one win and four losses.

So far this season Fort Hays has achieved one win by dropping Kearney State Teacher's from Kearney, Nebraska. They have lost three.

The Omaha U. varsity cheerleaders are united in their drive to build school spirit. According to Karolee Wybenga: "We believe that OU teams should be backed and it inspired will win."

The squad is captained by Betty "Tiny" McMichael, a junior who is in her third year of cheerleading, is a member of Alpha Xi Delta. Her major is sociology. Tiny is also a member of Feathers, the Marching Angels and is on the Interpep Committee.

Wannette Bush, a senior, is an art major and has been cheering for three years. She feels that the school has pep but could use a lot more. "Webby" is a member of Zeta Tau Alpha.

She belongs to Feathers, Orchestis and WRA. Wannette feels that cheerleaders should be required to pass a written exam to make sure that they know something about sports.

Judy Zimmerman is in her first year of cheerleading and is a junior. She is a member of Zeta Tau Alpha and is majoring in biology. She took on the cheerleading job because she felt that she could give something back to the school in return for what it gave me."

Dr. Kennedy and Pat Meet At Fort Hays Game Here

A father and son will be reunited, after a fashion, when Omaha University plays host to Fort Hays State in the first conference game for both schools tomorrow afternoon here.

Dr. Paul C. Kennedy, head of the secondary education program at OU, is a Fort Hays graduate. He also did graduate work there before coming to OU in 1955.

Dr. Kennedy's son Pat is a freshman guard on the Fort Hays squad.

Pat attended Benson High School in Omaha where he earned a letter as a guard and tackle his senior year.

A chance to play football was part of the reason for Pat's deciding to attend his father's alma mater. Pat says that he also wanted to go to Fort Hays because of his father's attendance there and because he liked what he had seen of the school.

Pat is a biological science major and plans to become a high school teacher after graduation in 1964. He is considered one of the promising newcomers on the

Pat Kennedy

Fort Hays grid roster.

When Pat was asked why he didn't come to OU he replied, "My dad would have been my advisor."

Who will the folks be backing Saturday? Pat guessed that they might back the invading Kansans.
